OCTOBER 19-21
2017

VIII Moscow International Conference of Higher Education Researchers

DYNAMIC UNIVERSITIES FOR

DEAR COLLEAGUES!

We are pleased to welcome you to the 8th International Conference of Higher Education Researchers marking the 25th anniversary of the HSE. This year we propose to discuss the development of universities in a changing environment.

We selected the theme based on the fact that a university today is not just an entity passively reacting to external challenges but one generating innovations that require accelerated development as a necessary internal task.

It is noteworthy that the conference will take place at the Higher School of Economics. One of the essential features of HSE is a willingness to take the risks of innovative development and open up new opportunities for itself and others.

THE FOLLOWING TOPICS WILL BE COVERED BY DISCUSSIONS, SESSIONS, AND CONFERENCE KEY SPEAKERS:

- 1. New forms of university education
- 2. New educational technologies integration into the educational process
- 3. Consequences of changes for the academic profession
- 4. Students in a changing university: perception of the consequences
- 5. New organizational forms, structures, and processes in universities
- 6. Agents of accelerated development at the university: who are they?
- 7. University interaction with the external environment, role in the region's development

We hope every participant will find the most interesting area and contribute to the discussion of key issues on the proposed topics.

We hope that the Conference will be a thought-provoking and enjoyable for you

Sincerely,
Program Committee

Scientific workshop "From School to Adult Life with New Competences"

Languages: Russian and English (simultaneous interpretation).

Chair: Andrey Podolsky (NRU-HSE/MSU, Moscow)

The expert community has already defined the man of the future who, on one hand, adjusts to a fast-paced, digital and multicultural world, and, on the other hand, is fully engaged in the creation of this world. How real is a focused mass formation of the features? What are the research models, theories, and paradigms available to answer the question?

During the workshop we will discuss both the scientific and theoretical issues of human personality development in the changing conditions and real opportunities of the psychological and academic knowledge for providing the required course and results of such development.

1. How have people changed and how will they change in the coming decades?
2. What requirements will such changes apply (and do currently apply) to education?
3. For which part of such process can (must) school be responsible, and what may be left for the future (and out of the academic scope)?
4. To what extent are the contemporary educators ready for the constructive answers to these questions?
5. What should be changed in the teacher education system to bring the educators' readiness closer to the new requirements?

The workshop will be opened with a plenary paper by Professor A. Podolsky "The Formation of the 21st Century Competences: Good Intentions and Real Opportunities".

All further work of the workshop will be performed on the following to panels:

- Panel 1: Where and What Has to Be Taught in 20 Years: Setting the Goals
- Panel 2: From the Goals to Solutions: What Conditions Have to Be Fulfilled to Make the Educational Mainstream Fit the Time.

Round-table discussion "The Interfaculty Educational Programs: Are they the New Opportunities for the University Development?"

Language: Russian.

Chair: Kirill Zinkovsky (NRU HSE, Moscow), Peter Kiryushin (Lomonosov Moscow State University)

This round-table discussion is about a new trend in higher education – creation of the interdisciplinary and interfaculty educational programs. The implementation of these programs sets, apart from the advantages, the conflicts of the researchers', professors', and students' interests colliding obviously with the existing standards. The tension generated by the programs and the raised issues become the zones of the higher education institution development as well as of rethinking of both educational and scientific activities at university. The aim of this round-table is to discuss the interfaculty educational programs potential as the growing-points for universities. The round table will engage interfaculty program organizers and managers, representatives of the professional community, government entities, high-technology companies as well as the students of these programs.

room 518

Round-table discussion: "University, Inc.: the Tasks of Academic Corporation in the Conditions of Organizational Pluralism"

Language: Russian.

Chair: Kirill Zinkovsky (NRU-HSE, Moscow)

The assertion that universities are changing is contradictory. The conservatism of academic structures is obvious. However, introduction of the corporate forms and style of management at higher education institutions is not least obvious. Projects, quasi- and real companies to produce intellectual goods and services have been created at universities and in cooperation with universities. The scope of the new university activities ranges from the media, tourist and cultural areas to engineering, land management, and pharmacological inventions. At that, the discussion of any changes in higher education bumps into an insurmountable conflict between the believers in academism and university business, managerialism, and academic autonomy. Within the round-table discussion we propose to move beyond the war of the opposites. We would like to discuss how, in the conditions of an emerging university business, to set an internally efficient definition for the academic autonomy which would allow higher education institutions not for drifting across the channel of the changes of social nature, but for identifying them with the achievement of the true organizational pluralism.

The questions to be discussed at the round-table:

1. Are the changes related to the business and corporate approach penetration into higher education institutions a steady trend? How is it related to competition in the Russian market, and would universities be able to compete with business in long term?

15:00-16:30

Language: English

Chair: Daria Platonova (NRU-HSE, Moscow)

The first annual seminar is established to support young higher education researchers. This seminar is a scene of academic communication between a new generation of the higher education researchers and the leading scientists. In Russia, higher education as a study area has just started its active development mostly thanks to Dmitriy Semyonov’s ambitious attempts. In just few years, he managed to create a laboratory that becomes a significant center for studying higher education at the international level, relying on his team of students and postgraduates. Every day he exemplified that the young specialists can be the drivers of serious research and full-fledged participants of both scholarly and expert disputes. The seminar of young researchers is the inheritance of Dmitriy’s plans and ideas after his tragic death in August 2017.
